HOME AT LAST

It's been a long couple of months

We've tried to keep you all informed via our weekly VLOG but for those of you paying close attention, you know we didn't even get those out every week. On September 4th, Dylan's younger brother Derek passed away in a tragic car accident. 2 days later Dylan was on a plane headed to Alabama to help his dad and 2 days after that Missy was on her way to Pennsylvania to prepare for their arrival.

It was a whirlwind of emotions and logistics, but we were blessed to be there for and with family. We can't thank you all enough for your enduring love and support for us during this difficult time.

Preparing for 2020

This time we had in the US gave us a different perspective to reflect upon. Our team of Guatemalans did excellently in handling the daily operations of serving the families in the community. We even had someone else step up to help in our absence, who we are in the process of bringing on as an official volunteer!

Missy continues her studies and is trying to find ways to accomplish her practicum and internships while training our new volunteer while meeting with families again. Dylan is working to give more autonomy to our team so he can focus more on fundraising for the ministry as a whole and participate as a member of the Servants Executive Team. Our goal has always been to create an indigenously run ministry in Guatemala that needs little oversight from us. This occasion to go to the US forced us into a testing ground to see how prepared our team is for that.

As the year comes to a close we are witnessing graduations, preparing for school to start again in January, evaluating families and our care for them, while also reflecting upon what we did well this year and how we can improve. Please join us in prayer for God to give us 20/20 vision for 2020 as we continue to seek his will not only for our ourselves but also the ministry as a whole.

These past couple months we were taught how much we are truly loved by all of you as you helped us in our time of need. We are so blessed by you all! Gracias.

We were also blessed to spend time with family and friends we haven't seen in a while!

We weren't able to see everyone, but we hope to make up for those missed connections during our next planned trip to the US. Most people have been asking us when that will be and the simple answer is, "we don't know yet, but once we do, so will you!"
